Elissa Watkin, age 3

Beautiful, simple and charming story about embracing friend's differences! Our three year old daughter loved this book from the moment she saw it. It's beautifully simple illustrations captivated her and the funny and easy to understand story was totally engaging. It's made food shopping so much more fun as she tried to spot Colin the carrot and Lee the pea! After only a few reads she was able to tell the story herself just by looking at the pictures. The underlying theme of embracing people's differences makes it all the more charming.

Sabrina Chorley, age 4

This was a very funny book with funny illustrations, Colin and Lee is a lovely story about friendship. The illustrations really helped to tell the story. A great book

Eleanor Haines, age 4 and mum Tanya

I must admit that whilst this was a sweet little book about unlikely friendships, my four year old did find it a little boring. There wasn't much text on each page and the pictures were very simple. Usually when we read a short story, we discuss the pictures and point things out etc, but we couldn't really do that with this book. So it didn't capture her interest for very long. In her words 'I think we should give William this book. It's for babies.'

William is my one year old nephew. So I took her advice and read it to him and *he loved it. So in our opinion, a mum, a four year old and a baby, we all agreed this book is much better suited for a younger audience. Simple, bright pictures. Simple short text so that they don't get bored, and a nice message about being friends.

Jack, age 4 and mum Emma

What a quirky but fun book! We had lots to talk about here, and the plot/pictures made my four year old laugh. It seems very simple on the surface but led to some thoughtful conversations about friendships and relationships. Jack also enjoyed reading it to himself, using the pictures to retell the story. A really clever idea.*
